They were then escorted to the depot, where the secretary remained for over half an hour conversing and shaking hands with the citizens and some of our farmers who had come to see the representative of their interests in the cabinet at Washington, Secretary Rusk in a lengthy conversation with the Associated Press representative expressed himself as well satisfied with the showing made here in this new industry. He said that a better quality of cane might be found to raise, but there was no doubt that this part of the country was well suited for sorghum cane and that cane is the crop which should be raised in the southwest. "It seems." he said, "as if every part of this territory is adapted to ane raising, and if sugar making from sorghum cane is a success here you can support a mill on every two miles of land." He advised the farmers to cultivate the fields three or four times so that the soil seeds three or four times so that the soil would be kept preperly stirred up, and expressed his belief that then they could raise much larger crops. He said that some of the cane was reported to him to yield 70 per cent of sugar, which was a very large quantity. Most of the cane made a very good showing considering that it had been without rain for two months, but that which was raised on oider ground where moisture could be retained for some length of time showed the best.
